

The diagram illustrates a 1D lattice system. The top part shows a row of 9 white squares, each with a black border, set against a gray background. These squares represent the initial state of the system. Below this, a horizontal line is drawn across a white rectangular area, representing the final state of the system after a quench.